

The first time I blogged about a parenting idea we'd tried, to help our family grow spiritually, I was blown away by the response. Parents commented about it, shared it and, best yet, told me how it had benefitted their families. Subsequent posts with related ideas netted similar responses. I learned that lots of parents want to spiritually lead their families, but they need confidence, inspiration and practical ideas.

A few months ago I invited several parents to read, discuss and try ideas from my new book, "Lead Your Family." I can't tell you the joy I've experienced. One parent said, "This is the first time we've ever read the Bible and prayed with our kids." Another family shared how a chapter gave their home more peace.

Is this book the tool that your church parents need to begin spiritually leading their families?

"The disintegration of the family continues to be our culture's greatest challenge. The only hope for our culture is the family and the only hope for the family is the spiritual leadership of parents committed to biblical principles."
